

Dr. Barry Wallerstein is a Senior Policy Fellow with the UCR School of Public Policy. Dr. Wallerstein served for nearly 2 decades as Executive Officer of the South Coast Air Quality Management District (SCAQMD) - an agency charged with protecting the health of 17 million residents in Southern California through achieving federal and state clean air standards. The SCAQMD is a national and international leader in such scientific and policy efforts.

He holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in biological science from the University of Southern California and a doctorate (D.Env.) in Environmental Science and Engineering from UCLA.